This the reality of many Nigerians and myself. Getting into tech was so hard 4 me that when I found out that there are Nigerians that paid to learn with online bootcamps, I just couldn't believe it. At 1st, u need a laptop, then electricity, internet, food etc..

Keziyah Lewis @KeziyahL

Thread: Let's talk abt how expensive it is to start a career in tech & how it affects poor and POC folks. (Not just talking about bootcamps)

Tech conferences can do more by providing some form of support to aspiring developers. My first tech conference was @pyconnigeria and it was because they offered a scholarship - accommodation, transportation and feeding. To get more Nigerians into tech,.....

In lieu of payment, tech reviewers of TSD1.11 paid for 50 print copies to go to Nigeria. We added 6 to that number and paid shipping costs.

Before I go on let me tell you a Jollof Story

Once Upon a Time
#PyConNA 2016

The Jollof rice

4 Africans, a Namibian, a Nigerian, a Senegalese and a South African were having a discussion. The Nambian said the Nigerian:

I really like Jollof rice.

The Nigerian replied

Wow, then I will cook you some

The Senegalese cuts in and started explaining the origin of Jollof rice. The Senegalese explained that Jollof rice originated from Senegal since it was the name of an ancient senegalese empire.

An argument ensued which got the South African interested:

Well, if the Jollof rice came from Senegal and the Nigerians adapted it, then it must be open source!

Said the South African. QED

I got Two Scoops of #Nigerian #Jollof and some more. I believe we should both count ourselves blessed 😊?

POST PYCONNG 17

Thanks for the love. We also look forward to your own event in the not too distant months. And, guess what, we shall celebrate it.
